Concept Statement

In order to make this space functional and aesthetically pleasing for a family of five, it was necessary to reconfigure this space to utilize an open concept,. By rearranging the floorplan layout, an open concept was created which provides a natural flow through out the house, as well as providing an even flood of natural light. In addition, incorporating the natural environment into the space was essential in making this Balinese style Bungalow a comfortable living space. Materials native to Malaysia such as teak wood and granite are used through the space. Plants and water features were also used to bring the outdoors in. Finally, to pull the space together, the house uses natural earth toned paints and textiles to create a clean, modern, and inviting living space.
